

BASIC SHAPE OF THE CONSTELLATION	SILHOUETTE FROM A CONSTELLATION PHOTO	GILGAMESH DRAMATIS PERSONAE	NOTES & SKETCHES
 Spica Virgo		 Shamhat the harlot	 I imagined this Ishtar shrine scene as Shamhat being sent out to bring Enkidu back to Uruk.
 Hercules		 Callow Gilgamesh	The Greeks knew this star shape as The Kneeler before they called it Hercules. Stories of a hero who slays a lion and wears its skin are associated with Gilgamesh and with the star pictures Hercules and Orion. Hercules' head in some pictures is to the north, in others, the south.
 Great Square (with Pegasus and Andromeda)		The transforming forest gate 	 Goddess, bull and so-called winged gate of the Akkadian Period. Probably the scene is an episode from a lost myth.
 Perseus	 vs Pleiades	Transformed Enkidu 	In Old Babylonian and early Kassite art, Ameru is a god with a scimitar and sometimes a gazelle, a fitting god for desert nomads. Akkadian amuru means west and also the star group Perseus. I see Ameru's gazelle as symbol for the Pleiades cluster under Perseus' right foot.
 Orion (with Taurus and Winter Circle, or the 7 auras of Humbaba)		Transformed Gilgamesh 	 "Bilgames and Enkidu slay the Bull of Heaven," early second millennium BC, Babylonia.
 Cetus		Humbaba 	 Cetus as whale is Greek, but maybe first had talons &amp; lion-head of the Babylonian stars Lulal &amp; Lатарak.
